ABOUT THIS PUBLICATION

Library of Parliament legislative summaries summarize bills currently before Parliament and provide background information about them in an objective and impartial manner. They are prepared by Research and Education, which carries out research for and provides information and analysis to parliamentarians, Senate and House of Commons committees and parliamentary associations. Legislative summaries are revised as needed to reflect amendments made to bills as they move through the legislative process.

For clarity of exposition, the legislative proposals set out in the bill described in this legislative summary are stated as if they had already been adopted or were in force. It is important to note, however, that bills may be amended during their consideration by the Senate and House of Commons and have no force or effect unless and until they are passed by both houses of Parliament, receive Royal Assent and come into force.

APPENDIX – BILL S-11

LEGISLATIVE SUMMARY OF BILL S-11: FEDERAL LAW–CIVIL LAW HARMONIZATION ACT, NO. 4

1 BACKGROUND¹

Bill S-11, A fourth Act to harmonize federal law with the civil law of Quebec and to amend certain Acts in order to ensure that each language version takes into account the common law and the civil law (short title: Federal Law–Civil Law Harmonization Act, No. 4), was introduced by the Representative of the Government in the Senate, Marc Gold, on 26 October 2022.² On 13 December 2022, the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs considered the bill and presented its report without amendment on 14 December 2022. Bill S-11 passed third reading in the Senate on division on 15 December 2022.

This is the fourth bill introduced by the government in the course of the harmonization project undertaken by the Department of Justice Canada (Department of Justice) as a result of the coming into force of the Civil Code of Québec (CCQ) in 1994. The other Acts, Federal Law–Civil Law Harmonization Act, No. 1,³ *Federal Law–Civil Law Harmonization Act, No. 2*⁴ and Federal Law–Civil Law Harmonization Act, No. 3,⁵ came into force in 2001, 2004 and 2011, respectively.⁶

Bills to harmonize federal law are generally passed in a consensus-finding, cross-party fashion and are not controversial because they do not, in principle, seek to change the “legislative direction, substance or very foundation” of a bill.⁷ However, they are highly technical and require a thorough analysis of existing laws.

1.1 PRINCIPLE OF COMPLEMENTARITY BETWEEN FEDERAL LAW AND CIVIL LAW⁸

Since 1867, the Parliament of Canada has enacted more than 300 statutes that are designed, in whole or in part, to regulate matters of private law. It has done so primarily under Parliament’s exclusive jurisdiction over matters that, had it not been for the division of powers in the Constitution Act, 1867,⁹ would have fallen under the provinces’ jurisdiction over property and civil rights. Examples of these matters are marriage and divorce, bankruptcy and insolvency, bills of exchange and promissory notes, interest on money, admiralty law, patents of invention, and copyright. To the same end, though less directly, Parliament has enacted statutes that primarily regulate questions of public law but also include provisions that rest on concepts or regulate relationships governed by private law, such as matters of income tax concerning the tax consequences of the sale or transfer of receivables, a donation or a legacy.

All these statutes do not create an independent legal system. Because these Acts derogate from or add to the *jus commune*¹⁰ of each province, they are supplemented by the relevant provincial law, which is used to interpret them and to apply them. There is, therefore, a complementary relationship between federal legislation and the jus commune of the provinces.

In Quebec, the civil law – the jus commune governing private law – supplements federal legislation in the same way as the common law does in the other provinces. This role can also be described as “suppletive”¹¹ to federal legislation, as recognized and implemented by the courts.

1.2 PURPOSE OF HARMONIZATION

Harmonization aims to ensure that the existing provisions of federal laws are brought into line with the existing civil law and common law in both of Canada’s official languages.¹² It also addresses the question of pre-Confederation law and the need to rewrite the French versions of federal statutes in order to reflect the common law.¹³

The reform of the CCQ, which made changes in language and in substance to Quebec’s common law, has an impact on federal legislation. Changes in vocabulary highlighted disparities between federal legislation and the new civil law terminology.¹⁴ As for the substantive changes, traditional institutions were reshaped; new concepts, created; new institutions, established; and existing rules, reformed.

With respect to pre-Confederation law that continues to be in effect in Quebec, this problem has been described as follows:

Problems are also being caused by the survival of a certain number of provisions of the Civil Code of Lower Canada that predate Confederation. The reason for their survival is that Quebec has been unable to repeal them (they concern matters which since 1867 have been under federal jurisdiction) and Parliament has not yet done so. These provisions were part of one Code and one whole system. Since the demise of that Code, they have been isolated from the system to which they belonged. They express a law frozen in a wording more than a century old, and their relationship with the current civil law has become imbued with conflict.¹⁵

In 1993, in anticipation of the coming into force on 1 January 1994 of the CCQ, which would replace the Civil Code of Lower Canada (CCLC), the Department of Justice created the Civil Code Section to review federal statutes to ensure that they properly reflect both legal traditions, namely the civil law system in Quebec and the common law system in the rest of Canada.

However, the reform of the civil law in Quebec is not the only factor responsible for the lack of harmony between the federal law and the civil law. Although bills and regulations have been co-drafted by a bijural drafting and revision team within the Legislative Services Branch since 1978,¹⁶ Parliament has not always taken the civil law system and its language into account when setting out any new private law standards. This has been obvious in three different ways:

- the use of vague or inaccurate phrases to express concepts for which there is a recognized vocabulary in the civil law;
- the expression of legislative provisions only in accordance with the common law system, so that the two legal traditions did not receive equal treatment; and
- the policy of so-called semi-legal legislative drafting, whereby, for a number of years, the language of the civil law was used only in the French version and the language of the common law was used only in the English version, resulting in unequal treatment of Canada's anglophone and francophone communities.¹⁷

The Government of Canada has cited other reasons to justify the need to harmonize federal statutes with the civil law of Quebec. Some of these reasons are set out in the preamble to the Federal Law–Civil Law Harmonization Act, No. 1, which states, among other things, that:

- all Canadians are entitled to have access to federal laws in keeping with their legal tradition;
- the civil law reflects the unique character of Quebec society;¹⁸
- the harmonious interaction of federal and provincial legislation is essential; and
- the full development of our two major legal traditions gives Canadians a window on the world and facilitates exchanges with the vast majority of other countries.

Two rules of interpretation were added to the Interpretation Act in the context of this first harmonization Act, provided for in sections 8.1 and 8.2:

8.1 Both the common law and the civil law are equally authoritative and recognized sources of the law of property and civil rights in Canada and, unless otherwise provided by law, if in interpreting an enactment it is necessary to refer to a province's rules, principles or concepts forming part of the law of property and civil rights, reference must be made to the rules, principles and concepts in force in the province at the time the enactment is being applied.

8.2 Unless otherwise provided by law, when an enactment contains both civil law and common law terminology, or terminology that has a different meaning in the civil law and the common law, the civil law terminology or meaning is to be adopted in the Province of Quebec and the common law terminology or meaning is to be adopted in the other provinces.¹⁹

1.3 STAGES IN THE HARMONIZATION PROJECT

Since 1993, the federal Department of Justice has examined over 700 federal statutes and has identified 350 that need to be harmonized.

The first stage in the harmonization project was to establish how and on what basis Quebec civil law came into contact with federal law, in order to determine the nature and extent of action necessary. Two studies were then completed.²⁰ In parallel, the Department of Justice held consultations with leading authorities in the faculties of law in the province of Quebec. Following these consultations, the Department of Justice issued a report suggesting a methodology and a work plan.

In the second stage, pilot studies were carried out to determine what amendments should be made to the federal legislation in order to reflect the new context.²¹

The third stage involved specific studies of surviving provisions of the CCLC (enacted in 1866) governing subjects that, after 1867, came within the exclusive jurisdiction of Parliament of Canada (for example, marriage, insolvency, maritime law, the Crown and bills of exchange) and that had not been repealed or even amended by the province because it lacked jurisdiction.²² Researchers identified 478 provisions of the 1866 CCLC that were likely to cause problems.²³ They also found that 111 of these had been validly repealed, in whole or in part, by Parliament and 64 had been repealed by the pertinent provincial legislature. In addition, another 261 articles were affected by federal legislation, rendering them of no force or effect, in whole or in part. This meant that 42 articles were still in effect, although 17 of these were subject to dispute.²⁴ According to the Department of Justice, repeal of these provisions would help to clarify legislation and avoid conflict between laws.

Some of the laws identified in the harmonization project will be harmonized when they are substantially revised or modernized.

1.4 CONSULTATIONS ON BILL S-11

Consultations on Bill S-11 were held from 1 February 2017 to 1 May 2017.²⁵ More than 400 stakeholders provided comments, including banks, all bar associations and the Government of Quebec.²⁶ Introductory materials were also published to gather comments from key legal stakeholders who benefit from the harmonization of federal laws and to understand how the laws, as drafted, were interpreted by experts in the field.²⁷

Prior to their appearance before the Standing Senate Committee on Legal and Constitutional Affairs, Justice Canada officials produced an extensive analysis of each of the amendments made by the bill.²⁸ During their appearance, they explained that, since Parliament now takes harmonization into account when drafting legislation, the number of statutes that need to be harmonized is no longer increasing. In addition, Department of Justice officials said that a legislative revision services group was established in 2002 to ensure all Canadian laws undergo a thorough bijural review.²⁹

1.5 POLICY ON LEGISLATIVE DRAFTING

Since June 1995, all new legislation drafted by the Department of Justice must comply with the Policy on Legislative Bijuralism.³⁰

According to this policy, the Department of Justice:

- formally recognizes that it is imperative that the four Canadian legal audiences³¹ may read federal statutes and regulations in the official language of their choice and find in them terminology and wording that are respectful of the concepts, notions and institutions proper to the legal system of their province or territory;
- undertakes, in drafting both versions of every bill and proposed regulation that touches on provincial or territorial private law, to take care to reflect the terminology, concepts, notions and institutions of both of Canada's private law systems; and
- charges the Legislative Services Branch with the mandate of seeing to the respect and the implementation of legislative bijuralism, in bills and proposed regulations.

2 DESCRIPTION AND ANALYSIS

2.1 KEY AMENDMENTS

Bill S-11 has 642 clauses and seeks to amend 51 statutes under the responsibility of nine federal departments for harmonization purposes. Most of the amended legislation affects the financial sector. The following is a non-exhaustive summary of 15 major terminological changes that illustrate the harmonization implemented by this bill. Each term is accompanied by a brief rationale for the proposed amendment and examples of changes. The underlined terms are those added or changed by the bill and explained below.

Bill S-11 makes various types of terminological changes, which can be categorized as follows:

1. definitions;
2. legal concepts; and
3. contextual terms or expressions.

PRELIMINARY VERSION

UNEDITED

This legislative summary deals with the first two categories in more detail. A non-exhaustive list of amendments by category can be found in the appendix of this document.

It should be noted that the term used in the English or the French version depends on the legal tradition associated with each version. Therefore, in the English version of the amended legislation, the concept of common law is presented before that of civil law, and vice versa in the French version (e.g., section 125 of the Bank Act, amended by clause 19 of Bill S-11).

The following analysis is based on documents prepared by the Department of Justice: the Bijural Terminology Records,³² which list the language issues raised by the various harmonization Acts, and the Clause-by-Clause Analysis.³³

2.1.1 Immovables

2.1.1.1 Rationale

The concept of “bien immeuble” [IN FRENCH] in civil law does not correspond to that of “real property” in common law. Moreover, although the term “bien immeuble” [IN FRENCH] may be used in common law, it is preferable to use the term “bien réel” [IN FRENCH] in the French version.

The problem in much of the legislation addressed by Bill S-11 is that only civil law terminology (“immeuble” [IN FRENCH]) is used in the French version and only common law terminology (“real property”) is used in the English version.

The solution proposed in the bill is to add the term “immovables” to the English version of legislation to reflect the civil law, while adding the term “biens réels” [IN FRENCH] to the French version in order to reflect the common law.

2.1.1.2 Examples

2.1.2 Agent or Mandatary

2.1.2.1 Rationale

A “mandataire” [IN FRENCH] in civil law is the equivalent of an “agent” in common law. The problem in most of the legislation addressed by the bill is that only the common law terminology (“agent”) is used in the English version, and only the civil law term “mandataire” [IN FRENCH] is used in the French version.

The proposed solution is to add the term “mandatary” after “agent” in the English version of the targeted legislation in order to correspond, in civil law, to the common law concept of “agent.” In these cases no amendment is required to the French version, since the term “mandataire” [IN FRENCH] is appropriate for both civil law and common law.

2.1.2.2 Examples

English version only: clause 4 amending sections 20(1)(d) and 20(1)(e) of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 5: In this example, which reproduces sections 20(1)(d) and 20(1)(e) of the Bank Act, the English version is being amended to add the term “mandatary,” which is underlined in the text, following the word “agent,” to designate a person dealing with a bank or a person who has acquired rights from the bank against whom the bank may not make the assertions set out in paragraphs (d) and (e). The French version remains unchanged.

Source: Table prepared by the Library of Parliament.

2.1.3 Fiduciary

2.1.3.1 Rationale

In the current Bank Act, the original definition of “fiduciary” or “représentant” [IN FRENCH] reads as follows:

- English version: “means any person acting in a fiduciary capacity and includes a personal representative of a deceased person.”
- French version: “Toute personne agissant à ce titre, notamment le représentant personnel d’une personne décédée.” [IN FRENCH]

The English and French versions do not correspond. In the English version, the common law expression “person acting in a fiduciary capacity” has a different meaning from the concept of “representative” used in civil law. The first refers to the civil law concept of a person who, because of a relationship of trust with another person, has an obligation of honesty and loyalty.

The harmonized solution is to add this case in the English and French versions to reflect civil law. Moreover, the expression “qui agit à titre fiducial” [IN FRENCH] is introduced in the French version, in accordance with the French common law.

2.1.3.2 Examples

English and French versions: clause 2(2) amending the definition of “fiduciary” in section 2 of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 8: In this example, the definition of “fiduciary” in the English version of section 2 of the Bank Act is being amended to include “any person acting in a fiduciary capacity.” The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the words “qui agit à titre fiducial” [IN FRENCH] and “qui, en raison d’une relation de confiance avec une autre personne, a envers celle-ci une obligation d’honnêteté et de loyauté” [IN FRENCH].

Table 8

English Version	French Version

PRELIMINARY VERSION

UNEDITED

A similar definition is introduced in the Cooperative Credit Associations Act, the Insurance Companies Act, the Trust and Loan Companies Act, the Canada Business Corporations Act, the Canada Cooperatives Act and the Canada Not-for-profit Corporations Act.

The term “representative” or “représentant” [IN FRENCH] is an umbrella concept that covers, in both legal systems, cases where a person acts for others.

The above term includes the concept of “personal representative” or, in French, “représentant personnel” [IN FRENCH], the definition of which is also amended in the Bank Act, the Cooperative Credit Associations Act, the Insurance Companies Act and the Trust and Loan Companies Act.

2.1.4 Rights

2.1.4.1 Rationale

In the Acts amended by Bill S-11, the English version referred only to the concept of “interest,” recognized in common law, and the French version referred only to the concept of “droits” [IN FRENCH], recognized in civil law. With respect to property rights and interests, the terms “interests” or “intérêts” [IN FRENCH] and “rights” or “droits” [IN FRENCH] refer to different legal realities in civil law and the common law.

Therefore, the term “rights” is added to the English version and the term “intérêts” [IN FRENCH] is added to the French version.

2.1.4.2 Examples

English and French versions: clause 252(3) amending section 100(2)(b) of the Insurance Companies Act.

Textual description

Table 9: In this example, which reproduces section 100(2)(b) of the Insurance Companies Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that reasonable proof may consist of a deceased holders' interest or right in the security. The term "right" is underlined to emphasize that it is being added following the term "interest." The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the term "intérêts" [IN FRENCH] following the term "droits" [IN FRENCH].

A similar solution was previously applied in the Federal Law–Civil Law Harmonization Act, No. 3. A similar addition is also made to eight other statutes harmonized by Bill S-11.

2.1.5 Pledge of a Security

2.1.5.1 Rationale

The term “pledge” is used in both legal traditions and is a type of security interest.

The corresponding term “gage” [IN FRENCH] is added to the French version to better reflect the term “pledge.”

It is important to note that the concept of “nantissement” [IN FRENCH], which continues to be used in common law in the French version, has been replaced by the concept of “hypothèque mobilière avec ou sans dépossession” [IN FRENCH] in civil law. An “hypothèque mobilière avec dépossession” [IN FRENCH] is also called a “gage” [IN FRENCH] or “pledge,” a concept that also exists in common law.

The solution is to add the term “gage” [IN FRENCH] in the French version or to replace the term “nantissement” [IN FRENCH] with “gage” [IN FRENCH], as the case may be.

2.1.5.2 Examples

French version only: clause 2(2) amending the definition of “sûreté” [IN FRENCH] in section 2 of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 11: In this example, the definition of “sûreté” [IN FRENCH] in the French version of section 2 of the Bank Act is being amended to add the term “gage,” [IN FRENCH] which is underlined in the text. No similar change is made to the English version, because it already contains the term “pledge.”

Textual description

Table 12: In this example, which reproduces section 121(4) of the Bank Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that a transfer or pledge of a security shown in the records of a clearing agency may be effected by making an appropriate entry in those records, under certain conditions. The term “pledge” is underlined to emphasize that it is being added. The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the word “gage” [IN FRENCH].

2.1.6 Hypothec

2.1.6.1 Rationale

Where the common law term “mortgage” is used in the English version, the bill adds the equivalent civil law term “hypothec,” which more closely corresponds to the concept of “hypothèque” [IN FRENCH] in the French version.

Moreover, the resulting concepts are also harmonized by adding, for example, the concept of “construction legal hypothec” to correspond to that of “hypothèque légale de la construction” [IN FRENCH] or the concept of “movable hypothecs” to correspond to that of “hypothèques mobilières” [IN FRENCH].

2.1.6.2 Examples

Textual description

Table 13: In this example, which reproduces the definition of “security interest” in section 2 of the Bank Act, the English version of the definition of “security interest” is being amended to add the term “hypothec,” which is underlined in the text, to the list of security interests that may be created. The French version remains unchanged.

A similar definition is introduced in the Cooperative Credit Associations Act, the Insurance Companies Act and the Trust and Loan Companies Act.

English version only: clause 223(1) amending section 382.1(1) of the Cooperative Credit Associations Act.

Textual description

Table 14: In this example, which reproduces section 382.1(1) of the Cooperative Credit Associations Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that, in the case of a loan made by a retail association, the amount outstanding of any “mortgage” or “hypothec” cannot exceed 80% of the value of a residential property. The term “hypothec” is underlined in the text, following the term “mortgage,” to emphasize that it is being added. The French version remains unchanged.

2.1.7 Hypothecary Creditor

2.1.7.1 Rationale

The term “mortgagee” in the English version refers to a common law concept. To reflect the civil law, the bill adds the term “hypothecary creditor.” The problem does not arise in the French version because the term “créancier hypothécaire” [IN FRENCH] is used in both legal systems.

2.1.7.2 Examples

English version only: clause 81(1) amending section 433(b) of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 16: In this example, which reproduces section 433(b) of the Bank Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that a bank may purchase real property offered for sale by a “hypothecary creditor,” a term that is underlined in paragraph (b), following the term “mortgagee,” to emphasize that it is being added. The French version remains unchanged.

2.1.8 Suretyship and Security

2.1.8.1 Rationale

The terms “garantie” [IN FRENCH] and “cautionnement” [IN FRENCH] are not equivalent. The latter has a narrower meaning, although it is included in the concept of “security” in the English version.

The proposed solution is to replace, in the French version, “cautionnement” [IN FRENCH] by “garantie” [IN FRENCH], a more neutral term that reflects the two legal systems.

However, when context requires, the term “cautionnement” [IN FRENCH] replaces “garantie” [IN FRENCH] and, in the English version, the concept of “suretyship” is added after that of “guarantee” (see clause 552 amending section 29(1) of the Financial Administration Act, discussed further).

2.1.8.2 Examples

French version only: clause 60 amending section 349(b) of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 18: In this example, which reproduces section 349(b) of the Bank Act, the English version remains unchanged. The French version is being amended to clarify that the Minister may require a company to provide security for the payment of any fees or charges that are or may become payable under this section, as the words “fournisse une garantie” [IN FRENCH] are underlined in the text.

Textual description

Table 20: In this example, which reproduces section 29(1) of the Financial Administration Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that any amount required to be paid for the purposes of this section is paid as a “suretyship,” a term that is underlined in the text and added after the term “guarantee.” The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the term “cautionnement fourni” [IN FRENCH].

In addition, clause 562 amends the English and French definitions of “payment bond” and “cautionnement” [in French], respectively, in section 72 of the Financial Administration Act.

2.1.9 Bequest or Legacy

2.1.9.1 Rationale

The bill adds the legal concept of “legs” [IN FRENCH] in the French version and “bequest or legacy” and “legacy” in the English version as a separate transaction from “don” [IN FRENCH] or “gift.” In French, the term “legs” [IN FRENCH] is used in both legal systems.

Unlike common law which recognizes a gift by will, civil law uses the concept of “legacy” to refer to a transfer of property by will.

English and French versions: clause 7 amending section 71(3) of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 21: In this example, which reproduces section 71(3) of the Bank Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that a bank may accept a gift, bequest or legacy in accordance with the conditions set out in this section. 2.1.10 Liquidator of a Succession

2.1.10.1 Rationale

The concept of “liquidators of a succession” or “liquidateurs de la succession” [IN FRENCH] replaces that of “testamentary executor” or “exécuteur testamentaire” [IN FRENCH], which has become obsolete in civil law.

The solution is to add the terms “liquidators of a succession” or “liquidateurs de la succession” [IN FRENCH] in the respective versions.

For the common law version, the English expression “executor or administrator of an estate” and its French equivalent, “exécuteur testamentaire” [IN FRENCH], are retained.

Furthermore, it should be noted that, in sections 119(1) and 119(2) of the Financial Administration Act, the original expression “heirs and agents” is replaced by “heirs, assigns or successors, and legal representatives or liquidators of a succession,” as illustrated further.

2.1.10.2 Examples

English and French versions: clause 2(2) amending the definition of “personal representative” in section 2 of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 23: In this example, the English version of the definition of “personal representative” in section 2 of the Bank Act is being amended to add the concept of “liquidator of a succession,” which is underlined in the text, following that of “administrator of an estate.” The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the concept of “liquidateur de la succession,” [IN FRENCH] following that of “administrateur successoral” [IN FRENCH].

Textual description

Table 24: In this example, which reproduces section 412 of the Bank Act, as it would be amended by Bill S-11, the English version is being amended to clarify that it is prohibited for a bank to act in Canada as a administrator “of an estate” or “liquidator of a succession,” both underlined in the text to emphasize that they are being added to paragraph (a). The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the words “des fonctions de liquidateur de la succession” [IN FRENCH].

2.1.11 Sequestrator

2.1.11.1 Rationale

Only the term “receiver,” recognized in common law, is used in the English version. Parliament must add “sequestrator” for the concept to be understood in civil law. The term “sequestrator” is therefore added to the English version.

The French version does not need to be amended because the term “séquestre” [IN FRENCH] refers to both the civil law and common law concepts.

2.1.11.2 Examples

English version only: clause 2(2) amending the definition of “personal representative” in section 2 of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 26: In this example, the English version of the definition of “personal representative” in section 2 of the Bank Act is being amended to include the concept of “sequestrator,” which is underlined in the text to emphasize that it is being added after the concept of “receiver.” The French version remains unchanged.

A similar definition is also introduced in the Insurance Companies Act, the Trust and Loan Companies Act and the Financial Administration Act.

2.1.12 In Trust

2.1.12.1 Rationale

The legal concept “in trust” has a broader meaning in English than the concept “en fiducie” [IN FRENCH], which is used in the French version to reflect the common law.

In civil law, property can be held either “in trust” in the sense of a formal trust (“en fiducie” [IN FRENCH]) or “in trust” where one person holds property for another person (“en fidéicommis” [IN FRENCH]).

The solution is to add to the French version the possibility of holding property “en fidéicommis” [IN FRENCH].

2.1.12.2 Examples

French version only: clause 55(2) amending section 291(4)(b) of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 28: In this example, which reproduces section 291(4)(b) of the Bank Act, the English version remains unchanged. A similar amendment is also introduced in the Insurance Companies Act and the Trust and Loan Companies Act.

French version only: clause 214(1) amending section 337(1)(d) of the Cooperative Credit Associations Act.

Textual description

Table 29: In this example, which reproduces section 337(1)(d) of the Cooperative Credit Associations Act, the English version remains unchanged. The French version is being amended to add the act of opening an account “en fidéicomis” [IN FRENCH], with the term underlined in the text to emphasize that it is being added following the term “fiducie” [IN FRENCH], for the purposes of this section.

A similar amendment is also introduced in the Bank Act, the Insurance Companies Act and the Trust and Loan Companies Act.

2.1.13 Lease

2.1.13.1 Rationale

In clause 585, the words “alienate” or “aliéner” [IN FRENCH], previously used in section 21(1)(a) of the Interpretation Act, have a narrower scope in civil law than in common law. In civil law, the concept of alienate does not include the concept of lease, yet in this provision, the concept of lease was also intended by Parliament.

In clause 619, the term “aliénation” [IN FRENCH] in the French version is narrower in scope than the term “disposition” in the English version. However, it is not sufficient to add the concept of “disposition” because, unlike in common law, neither “aliénation” [IN FRENCH] nor “disposition” [IN FRENCH] includes “location” [IN FRENCH] in civil law. However, “location” [IN FRENCH] is indeed intended in the context of this section.

Therefore, the terms “lease” or “louer” [IN FRENCH] are added in the respective version to reflect this additional consideration in civil law. The concept of “location” [IN FRENCH] cannot be equated with a form of acquisition in civil law, as is the case in common law.

2.1.13.2 Examples

English and French versions: clause 585 amending section 21(1)(a) of the Interpretation Act.

Textual description

Table 30: In this example, which reproduces section 21(1)(a) of the Interpretation Act, the English version of this section is being amended to add the act of leasing property or movable property as a designated action under this section, with the word “lease” underlined in the text following the word “alienate.” The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the words “de les louer” [IN FRENCH] following the words “de les aliéner” [IN FRENCH].

English and French versions: clause 619 amending section 7(b)(ii) of the Department of Canadian Heritage Act.

Textual description

Table 31: In this example, which reproduces section 7(b)(ii) of the Department of Canadian Heritage Act, the English version of this section is being amended to add the act of leasing as a designated action under this section, following the action of disposing of property. The concept of “lease” is underlined in the text following the words “dispose of.” The French version contains similar changes, namely the addition of the words “en disposer autrement” [IN FRENCH] and “les louer” [IN FRENCH], which are underlined in the text, following the words “échanger les biens” [IN FRENCH].

A similar addition is also introduced in the Bank Act, the Surplus Crown Assets Act and the Pest Control Products Act.

2.1.14 Disposition

2.1.14.1 Rationale

The French versions were problematic because the term “aliénation” [IN FRENCH] in the earlier French versions does not have the same scope as the terms “disposed of” or “disposition” in the English versions, in both civil and common law. The narrower term “aliénation” [IN FRENCH] is therefore replaced by “disposition” [IN FRENCH] in the French version of these Acts.

2.1.14.2 Examples

French version only: clause 360 amending section 793(8) of the Insurance Companies Act.

Textual description

Table 32: In this example, which reproduces section 793(8) of the Insurance Companies Act, the English version remains unchanged. The French version is being amended to clarify that “disposition” [IN FRENCH], term underlined in the text, of shares to which an order relates is a reason for which the Act shall cease to apply.

Textual description

Table 34: In this example, which reproduces section 20(a) of the Surplus Crown Assets Act, the English version remains unchanged. The French version is being amended to clarify that the powers conferred on the Minister by order with respect to the “disposition” [IN FRENCH], term underlined in the text, of assets are designated under the Act.

A similar addition is also introduced in the Bank Act, the Cooperative Credit Associations Act, the Financial Administration Act, the Canadian Centre on Substance Abuse Act, the Museums Act, the Department of Canadian Heritage Act, and the Pest Control Products Act.

2.1.15 Void/Null

2.1.15.1 Rationale

Only the common law term “void” is used in the English version of the legislation addressed by the bill. This term is inadequate as regards the CCQ.

The term “null” with the specificity “in Quebec” is added in order to add civil law terminology to the federal legislation, while avoiding possible confusion with the expressions “void” or “null” in common law, which have a completely different meaning in that legal system.

2.1.15.2 Examples

English version only: clause 9 amending section 91(a) of the Bank Act.

Textual description

Table 35: In this example, which reproduces section 91(a) of the Bank Act, the English version is being amended to clarify that, in Quebec, scrip certificates become “null” if not exchanged before a specified date. The words “or, in Quebec, null” are underlined to emphasize that they are being added following the term “void.” The French version remains unchanged.

17. This unequal treatment between the two communities is due to the fact that each language version is associated with only one of the two legal systems: the English-speaking community in Quebec therefore does not have access in English to legislative texts drafted in the language of the civil law, and the French-speaking community in the other provinces does not have access in French to texts drafted in the language of the common law; see André Morel, “Harmonizing Federal Legislation with the Civil Code of Québec: Why? and Wherefore?,” in Department of Justice, The Harmonization of Federal Legislation with Quebec Civil Law and Canadian Bijuralism: Collection of Studies, 1997, p. 14.
